SUICIDE AT CAPON SPRINGS.

David A. Zon. Becoming Despondent, Takes His Own Life.

Information was received here last night of the suicide by taking morphine at Capon ELDER A. B. FRANCIS, O. S. BAPTIST, WILL, preach in Wonn's Hall, 721 6th st. n.w., Sunday, 11*

Information was received here last night of the suicide by taking morphine at Capon Springs, W. Va., of a man supposed to be David A. Zon, who had lived in this city for several months. The police authorities have not been asked by the West Virginia officials to make any inuiqries about the relatives of the dead man.

Zon arrived at Capon Springs the 10th of last month, having gone there from this city, where he had a room at 1529 I street. He registered as "Mr. Zon, Washington, D. C." He failed to appear at the breakfast table yesterday morning, and Manager Charles F. Nelson went to his room and found him dead and but partly dressed. A vial that had contained polson was found on the bed beside him.

A note addressed to Capt. W. H. Sale, proprietor of the hotel, gave the information that Zon had taken the polson because he was without money or friends. But little is known of the man in this city. When he took rooms at the house on I street he said he was fifty-six years old; that he was a Hollander and had been a cotton buyer. So far as could be ascertained today there are no friends of the dead man in this city.

work, no cat.' The citizens elect their town commissioners, judge, attorney, constables, &c., &c., make their own laws and break them, are arrested by their own constable, found guilty by their peers and sentenced by a boy judge, who, by the way, will make his mark when he gets out in the world. Said to have been incorrigible at home, while on the farm he is among the most valued citizens of the Republic, not only by those in authority, but by his fellow-citizens. I came home feeling that I had witnessed a marvelous exhibition of the power those in authority, but by his fellow-citizens. I came home feeling that I had witnessed a marvelous exhibition of the power of love. Twenty-seven boys turned from the evil of their ways; children, perhaps in all cases, of parents incompetent to get the best out of their children, either through ignorance or environment, given the best chance to develop the best characteristics of citizenship in the greater republic. I am told that some of the best people of Washington and Baltimore are at the back of this Junior Republic; from what I saw I was convinced they never gave their time and money to a more promising enterprise. Full of promise, not only to the boys brought under the training of kind discipline, but to be of greater benefit in the saving of our boys. The Junior Republic has passed beyond the experimental stage, has come to stay and will be an indispensable adjunct of every large city having boys not bad enough for the reform school and too bad to be kept at home."

The inscription, "Commemorative Series, 1901," instead of "Pan-American Series, 1901," will be borne on the stamps issued by the government in commemoration of the pan-American exposition. This is in accordance with an opinion rendered yesterday by Assistant Attorney General Tvner on a question submitted by the fourth assistant postmaster general, Mr. Madden. Mr. Tyner decides that section 5408, Revised Statutes, in all probability was intended by Congress to prevent the use of postage stamps from becoming a medium of advertising ordinary business transactions. Accordingly the propriety of printing the words "Pan-American Series, 1901," on the contemplated Issue is doubted, as it would be in some sense an advertisement, the exposition being a private enterprise aided by Congress. But it is held there is nothing to prevent printing of the words "Commemorative Series, 1901," as it may be regarded as "the record of an historical period without any reference to a particular event." assistant postmaster general, Mr. Madden. Mr. Tyner decides that section 5:08, Re-

COMMENTS ON THE STRUCTURE BY THE NEWSPAPERS.

A Glorious Triumph. From the Washington Capital.

From the Washington Capital.

The glistening pile of marble at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and 11th street is a monument to the untiring industry, intelligence and business capacity of the editors and owners of The Evening Star. And they have well earned this monument, magnificent as it is. Those who have marveled at its splendor, from the Pavanozza marble of the business office on the first floor to the daintiness of the artists room veled at its splendor, from the Pavanozza marble of the business office on the first floor to the daintiness of the artists' room on the tenth, will tell you that I use no exaggeration of speech when I say that this building is the most complete as well as the most elaborate newspaper home in the world today. There are larger ones, but none better. This glorious triumph of Crosby S. Noyes and S. H. Kaufmann, that has come to them in the later years of their lives, has not been without untiring effort, not without many sacrifices in the earlier days of the enterprise, and not without a full realization of the duty they owed the people they sought to serve.

From the Oakland (Cal.) Tribune.

In The Washington Star the national capital has a model newspaper and one that passesses the universal confidence of its readers. It is conducted with signal A Visitor's View.

One of Washington's well-known physicians visited the republic on the Fourth of July, and in writing about it afterward had the following to say:

"No better way of spending the glorious Fourth presented itself to me than a trip to the famous National Juntor Republic on the Willie Newbold Farm near Annapolis Junction, Md. My vague anticipations were not fully realized. I expected to find a mob of young toughs, boys just on the verge of the reform school—not yet entitled to that distinction, but fast getting there. It seemed more like a boarding school for boys. Mr. Rogers assured me that the newcomers on their first arrival would come up to my idea, but one week of regular meals, comfortable beds and kindness at all times made a complete change in the worst cases the universal conducted with signal ability. This perhaps accounts for its great popularity and prosperity, of which a striking evidence has lately been given. The Star has just moved into a magnificent ten-story marble and steel edifice erected especially for its use. It is one of the fuest and most complete newsjaper offices in the world, the building being a model of architectural beauty. It was constructed by The Star Company, according to plans of the ablest architects in the country, drawn with especial reference to the uses for which it was designed. It is an ornament to Washington, which is noted for its exceptionally fine buildings.

**Deserves Its Success.**

From the Annapolis Examiner.

It was our pleasure to be in Washington, when the proprietors of The Evening comfortable beds and kindness at all times made a complete change in the worst cases they had.

"Not a boy on the farm has any desire to go back to his past, either in Washington or Baltimore. In my presence a boy was offered a furlough for a few days if he wanted to go back with his mother to Baltimore. He settled that notion by an emphatic 'No, ma'm! I don't want to go back but I want my mother to stay here; it would do her good.' And we agreed with him. The Republic may be a paradise for that kind of boy, but he has to work out his own salvation. It is in no sense a penal institution, but the motto of the Republic is, 'No work, no eat.' The citizens elect their town commissioners, judge, attorney, constables,

One of the most successful newspapers one of the most successful newspapers in the United States is The Washington Star, which, it goes without saying, is also an evening paper. Just the other day The Star tock possession of its new building on Pennsylvania avenue and invited all the newspaper men of the capital to the "house-warming." The greests were as "house-warming." The guests were as charmed with the interior as they had been

The Star of that time and The Star of to-day would be like comparing an ox cart to an automobile. Crosby S. Noyes, the pres-ent editor-in-chief and principal owner, be-came connected w. h the paper in INS3, and its phenomenal success is in large degree attributable to his able management. The Herald congratulates The Star and con-gratulates Mr. Noyes upon their deserved nosperity prosperity.
